

Guild Wars 2 names server in honor of gamer who passed away

July 20, 2012

3:55 PM MST

Roger "Oldroar" Rall
The Gaiscioch Gaming Community

It is sometimes easy to forget that the players we socialize with on a daily basis, that we laugh with, that we quest with, people we have learned to call "friend", are only mortals and as such are prey to the inevitable. The best thing we can do though when we lose someone that we care about, is to make sure that their memory lives on. ArenaNet, The people behind the highly anticipated Guild Wars 2 MMORPG, are doing something to help that happen for a passed gamer. They are naming a server in his honor.

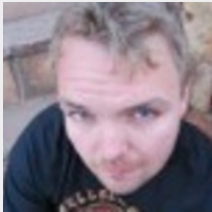

The "Sanctum of Rall" server is being named after Roger "Oldroar" Rall, who passed away last fall before the launch of the game he was eagerly awaiting, Guild Wars 2. Roger Rall was a member of the Gaiscioch gaming community and is known to have played Dark Age of Camelot, Warhammer Online and Rift.

The Gaiscioch community will be hosting a in-game memorial for Roger Rall on August 29th, 2012 on the "Sanctum of Rall" server. Guild Wars 2 launches on August 28th, 2012. More details can be found on the Gaiscioch Gaming Community website.

SUGGESTED LINKS

- Guild Wars 2's final beta weekend is here - Meet the new character races
- Amazon giving players \$5 credit with Guild Wars 2

Chase Jacobs
MMORPG Examiner

